"We literally look at buildings differently now."

— Program participant

TONY ROBINS offers lectures and tours that magically bring New York's architecture and history to life. Writer, historian, lecturer and guide, Tony Robins is the author of the popular annual "Downtown Open House" self-guided walking tours, the Heritage Trails Sitemarkers (New York's answer to Boston's Liberty Trail), and the book Classics of American Architecture: The World Trade Center. He has led countless visitors through the grand American metropolis, and lectured for museums, universities, and private groups around the world. Formerly Director of Survey at New York City's Landmarks Preservation Commission and Director of Education and Programs at New York's Municipal Art Society, he was the winner of a Rome Prize fellowship to the American Academy in Rome. And he has been published in The New York Times, Gourmet, Connoisseur, Architectural Record, Progressive Architecture, New York's Inside Design, SoHo Style, and Metropolis.

Let Tony Robins open your eyes to the city's wonders of steel and stone — as he has done for years for delighted audiences everywhere.
